Mr. John C. Campbell, Head
BBC Monitoring Service
Caversham Park
Reading, Berks., England

Dear John:

On so many occasions I have written you weeping bitter tears over the problems being encountered by our people in Cyprus that I think in all fairness I should tell you that things have been going very well recently. I have just received from [ ] a copy of the License for the Mediterranean Bureau under the Wireless Telegraphy Law and a copy of the Statute Laws of Cyprus #64, of 1954, which law provided for the duty-free importation of materials and equipment required for the operation of the monitoring station.

Both of these subjects have, therefore, been satisfactorily resolved and I think it reflects most favorably on the patience and understanding of the British authorities in Cyprus as well as in London. I am firmly convinced that there is a satisfactory solution to all our problems if we approach them with respect for each others views and with tolerance and understanding.

I am now planning a visit to all FBIS field bureaus, to begin about the middle of March. I plan to start my trip westward, ending up in London. I would certainly like to have you meet me in the Far East, or better still, come to Washington first and proceed westward with me. We should also give some consideration to the timing of our next joint meeting which is scheduled for Washington. At your convenience I would appreciate hearing from you on these subjects.

Sincerely,

Chief, FBIS
